Here is a collection of joined-up stories for these disjointed times, for the exiled and the out-of-place. Have you ever felt you are not where you should be? Rome's favourite love poet does; he must now entertain a bunch of hairy barbarians. A blood-stained dictator finds himself making breakfast for his nine youngest children in a Novotel. On the Edgeware Road a Syrian ophthalmologist tells his girlfriend about a sudden career change whilst, on the other side of the city, a stock-market darling explains how his sudden flight abroad is all part of the strategy. France's chic empress languishes in the damp Kent countryside—how did it come to this? In Beijing, an Ulsterman's friendship with the Empress Dowager is not going to prevent him being massacred. On the Western front, a Cumbrian gunner celebrates, finally, his imminent demobilization…

The action in this strange book, stretches from Chislehurst to the Chagos Islands, from Billericay to the Black Sea. What these men and women have in a common is one thing: they are all terribly far from home. And you?

"Chris Ruffle's In a Strange Land is a work of lively imagination that carries the reader across millennia and continents with wit, empathy and historical insight. From ancient Rome to Qing dynasty China to modern-day Moscow, we meet a cast of exiles—soldiers, poets, emperors, and ordinary wanderers—all searching for belonging."

Book of Lost Dreams

Joseph Yen

When the tides of history crash against the quiet shores of an ordinary life, the results can be both strange and devastating. Joseph Yen grew up in the shadow of civil war, revolution, and unrelenting political upheaval. Born into the household of a wealthy Shanghai industrialist, he might have expected a life of privilege and stability. Instead, the great storms of the age—national and domestic alike—swept him into a world of uncertainty.

Moving with his mother to Beijing, the young Joseph witnessed the Communist victory and the radical transformations of the 1950s through the curious, unblinking eyes of a child. As he advanced through school, he felt both the thrill of political change and the tightening grip of ideology, alongside the persecution of friends and neighbours. Yet his private world was no less vivid: friendships, an awakening love for music and literature, and the first stirrings of his sexuality shaped his inner life.

This memoir traces the arc of Joseph Yen's journey from his birth in 1942 to his exile from China in 1975. Through years marked by trauma, loss and profound hardship, he endured with wit, candour, and a keen fascination for the warp and weft of human existence. His story reminds us that the vast movements of history are often best understood through the small details of individual lives.

From the trenches of World War I to the heart of revolutionary China, Harold J. Timperley bore witness to some of the most turbulent events of the 20th Century. As a foreign correspondent, he exposed the brutality of Japan's war in China, risking his life to document the horrors of the Nanking Massacre. As a propagandist for the Chinese government of the day, he helped shape global understanding of the conflict, and later as a diplomat, he walked the razor's edge between impartiality and conviction during Indonesia's fight for independence.

In this meticulously researched biography, Brendan Cook unravels the complex legacy of a man revered by some and reviled by others—a man whose work influenced war crimes tribunals, challenged Western involvement in Asia, and helped to forge the modern Asian narrative. Drawing on personal letters, archival records, and eyewitness accounts, A Man of Exquisite Honour is a compelling portrait of a brilliant, difficult, and deeply principled figure whose life was defined by truth, justice, and sacrifice.

"The remarkable tale of Harold Timperley is told for the first time in this lively and detailed biography. Brendan Cook has scoured obscure records from personal and official sources and contemporary journalism to re-discover the story of this elusive man of principle, an energetic champion of Chinese and, later on, Indonesian independence against foreign oppression. Still active in retirement, he helped to found the humanitarian campaign, War On Want. From Beijing to Batavia and finally to Britain, Timperley comes out of the shadows at critical moments of modern history in a life that still resonates today."

The Irish in Hong Kong

By Mark O'Neill

Since its foundation, Irish people have played an extraordinary role in the construction and development of Hong Kong, in government, the army, police, judiciary, finance and in civil society—schools, hospitals, churches and welfare institutions. Ireland provided nine Governors, five Chief Justices, nuns who cured the city of tuberculosis and priests and ministers who founded high-quality schools that have transformed the lives of thousands of Hong Kong people. They are still flourishing today and are the choice of many Hong Kong parents. In sport, also, the Irish have made a great contribution to the territory—in racing, the Rugby Sevens and, most famously, Siobhan Haughey, the first Hong Kong athlete to win four Olympic medals.

This is the first book to give a comprehensive and detailed account of this Irish history. It fills a hole in the rich and multinational story of Hong Kong.

China, 1860. For ten years a bizarre Christian cult—the Taiping Heavenly Kingdom—has been locked in bloody rebellion against China's emperor. Millions have died. When the Taipings march on Shanghai, Mark Falchion will stand alongside the city's desperately outnumbered defenders. But among the Taiping ranks are Mark's true love, a beautiful woman archer, and his nemesis, a cruel and vengeful Taiping warrior.

And the Taipings are not Mark Falchion's only enemy. Also pitted against him are corrupt foreign businessmen, gun runners, and European powers determined to reap political advantage from the chaos.

In 'The Barbarian Manchu' Mark Falchion must tread a dangerous path to navigate through the challenges facing him.

"Chris Emmett has given as a rich historical adventure on a cinematic scale, landing us on the front lines in the closing stages of the Taiping Rebellion, the largest and deadliest conflict of the nineteenth century. Carefully researched and well-paced, the tale of the love of Mark Falchion and Ping Song-Mei, set against the backdrop of battles and betrayals, leads us to a compelling and dramatic finale."

Plum Blossoms in Primary

Richard Pratt

In China, poetry has always been considered the supreme art form, and the great poets of the past are national heroes. From their first weeks of Primary School, children learn works from a millennium and a half ago and this shared cultural foundation is key to understanding the country and its people. How better to gain this knowledge than the way the Chinese do?

'Plum Blossoms in Primary' takes you on a journey through China's national school textbooks studied by every child in the country and, in an accessible style, introduces the poems, the poets, their context, and their significance. It's all laid out such that non-specialists can appreciate the works in the original language. This book is important for anyone interested in China, or in poetry and, while aimed at the general reader, will also be of value to students of Chinese and as a text on World Literature courses.

"What a clever way to introduce Chinese poetry to non-Chinese readers! This lively and learned volume takes us through the traditional Chinese poems for Grades 1-6 in China today. All who love poetry, and not just Chinese poetry, will learn from Mr. Pratt's sympathetic readings and come away with new eyes for these memorable works. Highly recommended!"

A River of Blood

Adam Williams

Egypt 1099 CE
Samuel, a Jewish doctor versed in alchemy, and Gregory, his English apprentice, are investigating a terrifying plague. The Nile has turned red with blood and fish are dying.

Near a small island, they wrangle a badly torn body from the jaws of a crocodile — but was this beast the killer? Samuel suspects foul play yet the authorities block his efforts to find the truth at every step. Ignoring warnings from people in high places, and with nothing more to guide him than his scientific method, Samuel persists in his quest, especially after a series of gruesome murders seem to confirm his early suspicion.

Little does he know that the secret he will stumble on could shake the empire.

Blowing My Own Trumpet

Gordon Jones

The development of Hong Kong over the past half century has been almost miraculous. Gordon Jones is one of the British officials in the Hong Kong government who straddled the 1997 shift from British to Chinese sovereignty, helping to guide and enable the transformation. During a unique career of 34 years, he filled a wide variety of senior positions, including the District Officer for the Kowloon City District when he was involved in the top secret planning to clear the Kowloon Walled City and his final posting as the Registrar of Companies.

What the Cuckoo Said

Song Dynasty Poets: Volume II

Susan Wan Dolling

Volume II , What the Cuckoo Said, explores Southern Song Dynasty poets. A celebrated woman poet strikes the first note. After her comes a thematic chapter, "Blood Red the Raging River", a poem attributed to the legendary hero Yue Fei, followed by a surprisingly sentimental patriotic poet and a couple of his easy-going contemporaries. Next comes a rebellious woman branded as fallen and neglected for centuries. The volume ends with the romantic and passionate Dragon of the era.

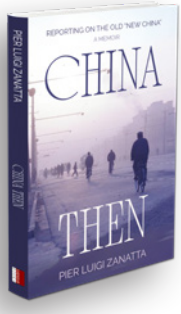
Never Say No

Kenneth Atkinson OBE

Ken Atkinson's business career began with selling ice cream in a northern English town, but soon blossomed into an international banking career that then morphed into playing a long-term role in helping to build Vietnam's economy and links with the world. He also played a crucial role in the opening up of both Russia and China to foreign invested projects, and for the past three decades and more has lived and worked in Vietnam with Ho Chi Minh City as his base. Along the way, there have been many up and downs, moments of suspense and humour, and it is all documented in this magnificent and unique memoir. Not bad for a kid who grew up amid the fields and stonewalls of northern England. From Saddleworth to Saigon, Ken's story is sure to inspire anyone with an ounce of ambition to pursue greatness and to never say no to opportunity.



China Then

Pier Luigi Zanatta

Mid-1970s Beijing was about as inscrutable as the world can get and China Then tells the story of that weird and momentous moment in history through the eyes of Italian correspondent Pier Luigi Zanatta, one of only a handful of foreign journalists living in China in those years. It was a time of great turbulence including the death of Mao, and Zanatta is a true witness to history. A talented Chinese-speaking journalist, he read the tea leaves, cycled the alleys and weighed up the rumors, trying every day to report to the world on the opaque and Byzantine doings at the heart of Communist China.

Peace at the Cathay

Peter Hibbard

Shanghai was a frenzy of development in the early 20th century as businessmen, thrill-seekers and refugees poured in from all corners of the globe. The Far East's most cosmopolitan city exuded luxury, style and excitement. One building on Shanghai's waterfront Bund captured it all: the Cathay Hotel (known today as the Fairmont Peace Hotel). The fortunes of this art deco masterpiece have mirrored those of the city, weathering war, revolution and radical social upheaval. Peace at the Cathay chronicles the fascinating stories and personalities behind the city's most iconic landmark.

Earnshaw Books is a book publishing house founded in 2003 and based in Hong Kong, dedicated to publishing books on China and beyond that help to enrich the understanding of China's history and culture. It was founded by Graham Earnshaw, a businessman, writer and musician with several decades of experience in the China world. He is well-known for his deep perspective on Chinese affairs, having first visited the China mainland in 1978. Over the years, he has been to every province and region of the country and has a deep respect for Chinese history, language and traditional culture. He moved to Hong Kong in 1973, learned to speak Cantonese and to read Chinese and worked as a reporter on the South China Morning Post. In 1976, he joined Reuters News Agency and worked in the Hong Kong and London bureaus before being assigned in 1979 to Beijing. He served as Beijing Bureau chief for Reuters 1985-1987, Tokyo Chief Correspondent 1987-1989, and was the Reuters Asian Editor from 1990 to 1995, responsible for all reporting from Pakistan to New Zealand. He then set up his own company in Shanghai, SinoMedia Ltd.

He has written and published a number of books, including On Your Own in China (1984), Tales of Old Shanghai (2008) and an account of his continuing walk across China, The Great Walk of China (2010) and The Formosa Fraud (2017) about George Psalmanazar. His translation of the Jin Yong kung fu novel The Book and The Sword was published by Oxford University Press in 2004. His Chinese name, 晏格文, was chosen by Jin Yong (金庸). He set up China's first rock band in the early 1980s, and was the first foreign journalist to ever witness a sky burial in Tibet.

He has recorded a number of albums of his own songs, including Leap of Faith (1996), The Red Album (2011), and The Tao of Music (2013).

He speaks in public regularly, in English and in Chinese, on a variety of topics, including the Chinese economy and life in rural China. He has addressed MBA and other student classes at many of China's top universities, including Tsinghua, Fudan and Nanjing. He speaks Mandarin and Cantonese fluently and his English is said to be acceptable. His personal website is www. earnshaw.com. Email: graham@earnshaw.com
